TASK A. WRITE A POST

Your teacher has asked you to write a post for the school blog about something you have cut out from your life (a job, a relationship, a habit, etc.). You can use your own ideas or one of the following to inspire you:

- I lost count of the times I was told to lose weight. In the end, after years of torture, I quit.
- Working there had a devastating effect on my self-esteem.
- I finally dumped my ex - and found a romance I never expected.
- I gave up hope of a cure for my chronic condition, and it's made me happier than ever before.
- After a lifetime of rushing about, I stopped hurrying and discovered the joy of slowing down.

Write a post (150-175 words) about something you have quit and explain why.

TASK B. WRITE AN E-MAIL

Imagine you have been teaching English for 10 years and you receive this email from one of your students:

Hello,

As you know, I've just done my A-Level exams and I'm planning to start uni in October. I've always wanted to be a teacher but, you know me, I'm quite indecisive. Now the moment has come and I have to make up my mind. As you have plenty of experience in teaching, I would like to hear your thoughts on this issue. What are the pros and cons of this job? Do you recommend teaching as a career? How stressful is it? Is it rewarding?

Thanks for being so helpful.

Regards,

Nadia

Write an email (150-175 words) to your student answering her questions. You can add any other information you consider relevant.
