You come across this piece of a larger text:

Companies that offer tutoring services are often not available to do so uninterruptedly. Their success is limited if they cannot extend help at any given time to those students who need it.

Fawad Saleem has created a platform that would offer tutoring help 24/7. Emailing a tutor guarantees a response within an hour, any time of the day. This became possible as they used AI collecting about 700,000 tutorials online.

TASK 2

You have a friend from Germany who is having issues at work in Switzerland. (S)He sends you this email:

Hey!

Me again, yup. That work issue I told you about is troubling me very much.

I can't get my messages across when presenting. I read the faces in the room and I can tell my presentations bore them to death. My boss doesn't seem to remember my key points after a couple of days no matter how much I try giving as much detail as I can. I'm starting to feel that the problem is not the specifics of online banking but me!

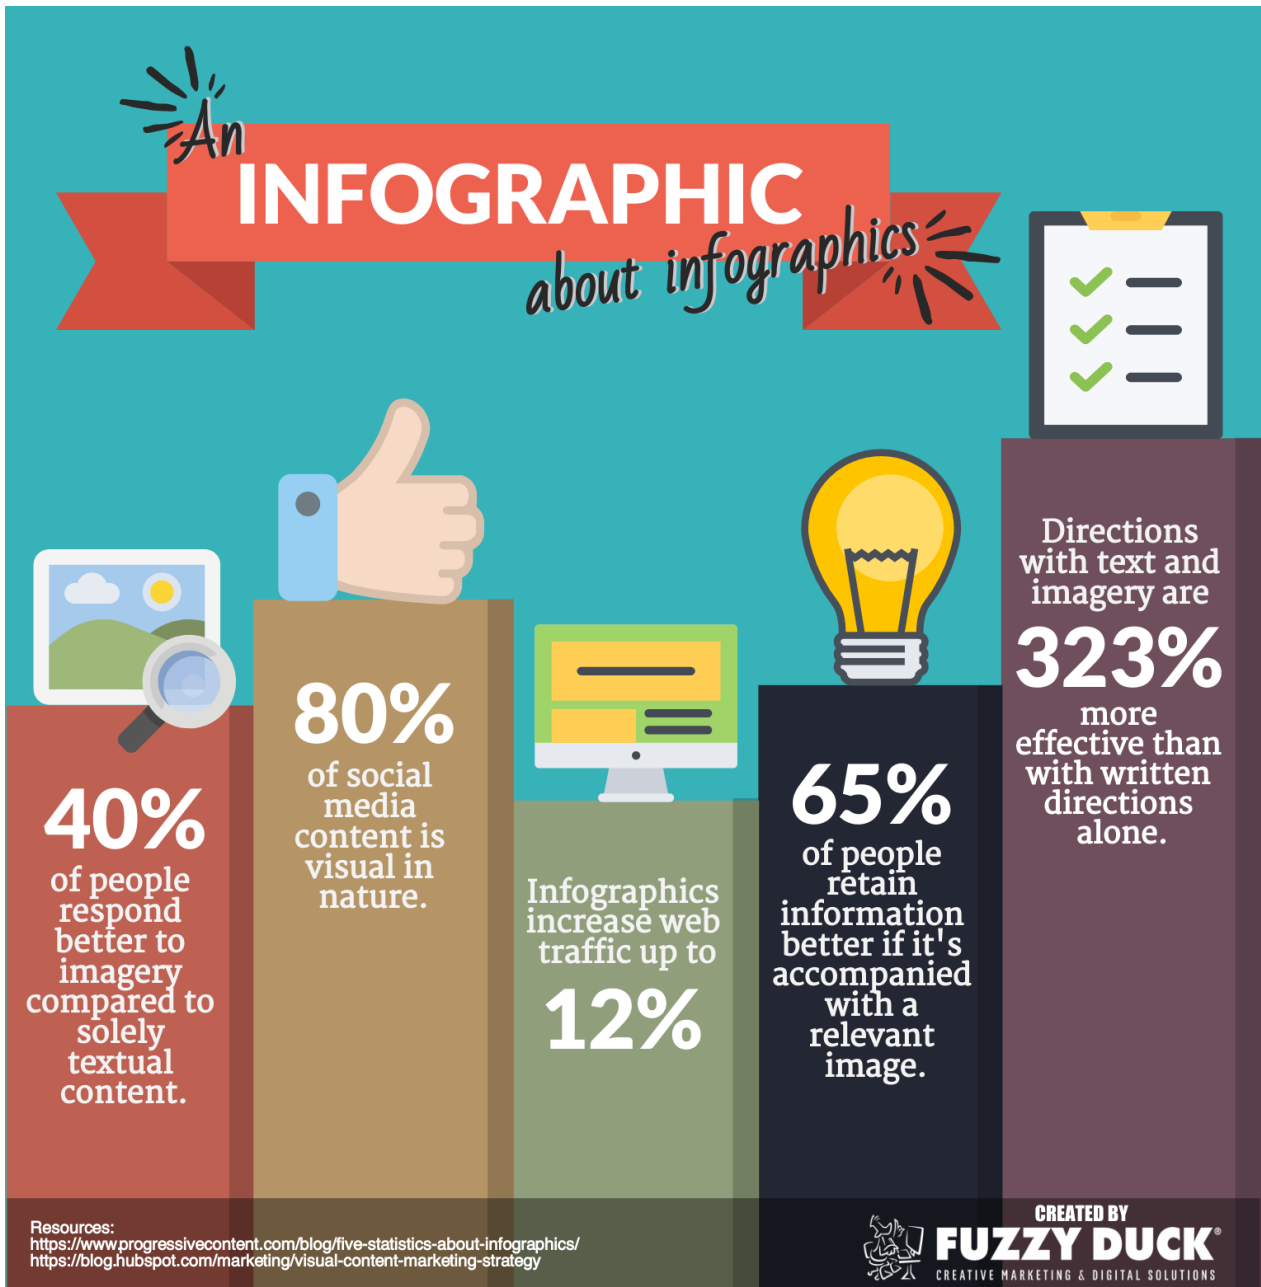

This is getting to me big time. I'm starting to be a bit sleep deprived but I manage with a good load of caffeine. Remember me quitting? Well, not happening. How do you cope with stress anyway?

Drop me a few lines whenever, ok? I'd appreciate some advice.

Thanks, pal.

G.

You want to help your friend. In order to do so, you come across this infographic:

Write your reply (150-175 words) where you calm your friend down, express your concern about his/her health, share some pieces of advice on how to improve it and some about his/her work situation. Choose the best pieces of information from the infographics to support your argument(s) and paraphrase them briefly.

Remember to use the grammatical, lexical and functional structures to show the level.
