MARK

You have just seen this message on an online forum:

*Hi,
We are a small group of young leaders under 20 who have been chosen to participate in this year's World Economic Forum. We would like to prepare our contribution by opening a democratic process where each civic-minded citizen expresses their view on urging problems for our generation. People are beginning to realize and recognize the serious concerns our youth face today. Some of these issues have been around forever; others, such as maturity at a young age and materialism are arising due to the change in the trends of this fast-paced life. What's your take?*

Write a forum entry in response to the message above, analyzing one of the biggest issues affecting youth today—not necessarily mentioned in the text—which can jeopardize their/our future, including some possible solutions to tackle that particular problem.

OPTION A

 ©Jean Balzan	Podcasts have exploded into our culture and are an excellent way to entertain ourselves while commuting, traveling, or working out. This crop of podcasts covers a range of topics, including sports, pop culture, news, identity, and everyday life. Each month, we ask visitors to send a review on the best podcast(s) to listen to.
---	--

Write a review of your favourite podcast commenting on the quality, structure, host, which people it generally appeals to and how it compares to other podcasts.

OPTION B

 ©lil artsy	Substance abuse and problematic patterns of substance use among youth can lead to problems at school, cause or aggravate physical and mental health-related issues and promote poor peer relationships. They can also develop into lifelong issues such as substance dependence, chronic health problems, and social and financial consequences. Local authorities in your area have decided to invest in young people's well-being.
---	---

As a concerned citizen, write a proposal on the issue to your town council so that it can take action.
